DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 12/21/2006 and 02/02/2007 have been entered. Claims 1-27 have been cancelled. Newly added claims 28- 38 are pending.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 28-38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by New, III (US 6,155,834).

With regard to claims 28, 33, and 37, and the limitations of presenting on the display, utilizing a graphical user interface, the keyword in a contextual presentation, the keyword having n characters, where n is greater than 2, and then presenting on the display, using the graphical user interface, the contextual presentation with at least the keyword missing therefrom, New, III discloses showing a word to a user on a screen, then showing the same screen with a portion of the word blanked out (Fig. 6a; Col. 15: 52 – Col. 16: 49). New, III discloses that the number of blanks may be adjusted by a user (Col. 29: 48-57), which could be as many blanks as there are letters in a word, if desired by a user. Additionally, New, III discloses that it is known in the art to display a word, erase the word, and then prompt a student to spell the previously displayed word by entering letters through a keyboard (Col. 1: 29-38).

With regard to the limitations of receiving a first received character entered into a keyboard by the learner, and before receiving any other character via the keyboard, determining if the first received character is equal to the first character of the keyword, New, III discloses checking each letter to see if it is correct, as the letters are entered (steps 910, 920, 940, 950, and 960 in Fig. 6a).

With regard to claim 33, and the limitations of determining that the first character is equal to the first character of the keyword, and based at least in part upon determining that the first character is equal to the first character of the keyword, determining to present the first received character on the display, using the graphical interface, New, III discloses these feature (Steps 920 and 930 in Fig. 6a).

With regard to claims 28, 33, and 37 and the limitation of wherein if the first received character is not equal to the first character of the keyword, then presenting on the display, using the graphical user interface, a first indication, New, III discloses that if the first letter is incorrect, then either a “*” symbol may be shown in the blank (Steps 920, 940, and 960 in Fig. 6a).

With regard to the limitation wherein if the first received character is equal to the first character of the keyword (or second received character is equal to the second character of the word, as in claim 33), then presenting on the display, using the graphical interface, a second indication that is distinct from the first indication, New, III discloses that if the correct letter is entered, then the correct letter is shown in the blank.

With regard to claims 29 and 38, and the limitations of receiving a second received character entered into the keyboard by the learner, and before receiving any other character via the keyboard, determining if the second received character is equal to the first character of the keyword, and if the second received character is not equal to the first character of the keyword, then presenting on the display, using the graphical interface, the first indication, and if the second received character is equal to the first character of the keyword, then presenting on the display, using the graphical interface, the second indication, New, III discloses that if the user enters the incorrect first character, then a “*” symbol is shown in the blank. The user receives another chance to enter the correct letter. Therefore, the second character entered by the user is compared to the first character of the keyword, and then a corresponding indicator is provided, as previously described.

With regard to claims 30, 31, 35, and 36 and the limitation wherein the second indication includes presenting the first character of the keyword on the display, New, III discloses this feature (Step 930 in Fig. 6a).

With regard to claims 32 and 34, and the limitations of receiving a request from the learner to present a hint on the display, and then presenting the second indication on the display using the graphical interface, New, III discloses that if the user enters a “” symbol as the answer, then the correct letter will be shown (Steps 940 and 950 in fig. 6a). Therefore, the user request the hint by typing a “” symbol instead of a letter, and be shown the correct letter.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to newly added claims 28-38 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection for the reasons set forth above.
